

UFU LAUNCH SATELLITE BROADBAND SOLUTION FOR RURAL AREAS

The Ulster Farmers union, in partnership with Satellite broadband providers bigblu, has launched a new improved offer exclusive to UFU members. The UFU says many rural households continue to be disadvantaged with a very poor or non-existent broadband service. The union says its new partnership with bigblu offers a broadband solution to all its members who have to date been unable to access a satisfactory broadband solution.

UFU Deputy President David Brown said; “We are delighted to launch a satellite broadband service for our members. Our basic package offers a download speed of up to 22 Mbps and an upload speed of up to 6 Mbps. We know from speaking to our members that many of them are unable to access good broadband so we have turned to satellite broadband technology to overcome this. I would encourage any of our members who can’t get online or who have poor broadband speeds to contact bigblu and find out more. It is very important to us that all members have good access to the internet which is so important to family run businesses”.

Bigblu Country manager Clifford Flynn said; “We are very excited to be partnering with UFU to provide reliable, affordable Broadband services to its members. We are totally devoted to the delivery of Satellite Broadband and with the ever changing improvements in technology we can deliver broadband at speeds which in some cases exceed those available over rural fixed line broadband connections.

We are also offering to all UFU members a 20% discount off the upfront charge and a half price wireless router. Simply call our dedicated sale team on 01869 722 629.
